

Nepal - Nour Zouya

Those looking for serenity and magic often find Nepal as a refuge for their quest. The 15-year-old knows this; he plans to meditate for a long time. This country with old culture and teachings of Hinduism and Buddhism encompasses the country with a divine meditative state. Make no mistake, the Himalayas have given him the urge to sit there and meditate for 7 months now. Why not? If the highest point on earth is found here in Nepal, why can't the highest point of consciousness be reached? The boy has been without food or water but was so absorbed in his state that no earthly need can stop. Nepal is known for its mystery and magic. This place has raised a Buddha and its magic continues to thrill us. Skeptics have criticized the boy's experience and journalists have also traveled from all over the world to validate it. The boy was there meditating for a long time. He may become the next Buddha as people say. However, like all bizarre observations, it is up to us to believe or deny the existence of such happenings. But Nepal does convince us that every experience is possible. After all, and despite the poor condition of the country, we are still able to experience sacred teachings.